Twenty-Seventh Sunday in Ordinary Time

The tenants in today's Gospel have been given a place to live and work and are asked to give back to their master some payment, some portion of the fruit of their labours. Despite the graciousness of the landowner, the tenants refuse to give back what is due and ultimately turn to lethal violence while they cling to what is not really theirs.

Most of us enjoy the physical and emotional comforts of family, friends, food, shelter, and some level of certainty about these comforts continuing. We also know the spiritual comforts that flow from the church, the Scriptures, prayer and our faith in God. God has given us the vineyard; we are the tenants.

We grieve the loss of life due to abortion. We seek a change of minds and hearts about the innate dignity of the child in the womb and the care of pregnant women. Pope Francis Writes, 'The gift of a new child, entrusted to a father and mother, begins with acceptance, continues with life long protection and has its final goal in the joys of eternal life ... For God allows parents to choose the name by which He himself will call their child for all eternity' (Amoris Laetitia The joy of love, 166)
