Worrying doesn't take away tomorrows troubles—
it takes away
today's peace.

Thirty-second Sunday of Ordinary Time Years C

Have you ever wondered what we will look like after the resurrection? Will we be young, old, prime of life? Have you ever wondered what we will do for all eternity?

Jesus gives us an answer to these questions when he answers the Sadducees in today's Gospel. They tried to trick him with the question of the seven brothers who all in turn legally married the same woman. Whose wife would she be at the resurrection, they asked?

Jesus tells them that the coming age will be different. Those "deemed worthy... can no longer die, for they are like angels." In other words our human concepts of young, old, prime of life won't matter. Nor will our feeble understanding of time. At the resurrection those "deemed worthy" will exist beyond our human limits of understanding. In restating the Old Testament promise of resurrection Jesus tells us not to worry about the limitations of this life as we aspire to eternal life.

The beautiful Irish seanfhócaíl, ar scathe a chéile a mhaireann na daoine, (it is in the shadow of others that we live) Is one of the many meaningful and beautiful sayings in the Irish language. It illustrates how interconnected we all are, to our own families of origin and, of course, our wider global Christian family.

While those families of origin are moving amongst us in this world, exuberant and full of life, that seanfhócaíl can give us a wonderful warm sense of belonging, place, care and support.

When they have moved on to their eternal realm, it takes on even more significance, of passing on the faith, trying to be a good example, instilling good values, being generous and decent and kind. I learned from them. I am of them. I am truly blessed. They have not left me, they have just caught the earlier train in the great journey of life and we will all rejoice at our final destination.

Today's readings remind us in this month of November that we are all linked to those who have gone on. The wonderful chain of life continues and it is great to be a link in that chain, just like the familial one. It is so comforting and hopeful, just like our faith itself.

I believe and trust that I will see my family again, God willing, and in the meantime I will try and honour the things they taught me. Sally McEllistrim, Intercom.
